A tempest treshened brow each morn.

Thou world-renewing breath, sweep on,
And waft earth's sweetness o'er the wave!
That earth will circle round the sun
When God takes back the life He gave!
To each his turn! Even now I feel
The f. et of children press my grav-,
And one deep whisper o'er it st al—

PRESIDENT GRANT AND THE RADICALS.

THE SPHINK DENOUNCED ON ALL SIDES.

Radicalism has had its Day. The Republican journals are making fierce onelaughte upon Grant and the administration, and, so far, the new President seems to have one friend-outside of his family. The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, writing on the 2d, talks very plainly and says: The experience of the most observing men at the capital does not recall a period in the history of any administration showing a paral-lel to the dissatisfaction that now prevails in the to the dissatisfaction that now prevails in the party in power, in consequence of the extraordinary distribution of the official patronage. The scenes and scrambles that have been exhibited here during the past two months have been beyond comparison disgusting, and, almost beyond the hope of reconciliation, demoralizing.

The greater portion of the prevalent discontent has been occasioned by the peculiar and extraordinary use the President has made of his appeinting prerogative; and if there have been no open and positive demonstrations, expressive of disapprobation and indicative of the most positive evidence of dissatisfaction, it is attributable to an overruling necessity to preserve the political peace, rather than to the existence of a predominating spirit of toleration and forbearance.

If the asseverations of members may be re-garded as conclusive testimony, they were, in numerous instances, utterly powerless to serve numerous instances, utterly powerless to serve their constituents in the way of appointments, from the fact that the President had appropriated so many places for friends whom he desired to gratify by conferring upon them some place of honor or profit.

In one State, in which there were but four important offices to confer, it is affirmed that the President appropriated two, and made the appointments against the remonstrance of the entire delegation for the mere gratification of a personal wish. But such complaints are numerous, and there is scarcely a member who is ready to confess to any obligation to the appointing power for the recognition of a single recommendation for office.

merous, and there is scarcely a member who is ready to confess to any obligation to the appointing power for the recognition of a single recommendation for office.

In very few ins ances has the President been successful in calling forth public approbation in reference to his appointments. The Quaker enterprise was intended as the master stroke of policy. Congressmen at first yielded a ready assent, probably because they were impressed with the novelty of sending the straight coats among the Indians; but very soon they discovered that the Indian agencies were too good offices to throw away upon such an undemonstrative class of citizens. Some thought the Quaker appointments were desirable, because the Friends would conciliate the savages and there would be no more fighting. But now it appears that the Quakers have nothing to do with buying the Indian supplies. In this branch of the business there may be as much cheating as heretofore, and the Quakers will have nothing to do but to distribute the trinkets and inculcate the principles of patience and forbearance. Another cause of complaint is that the Quakers are assigned to the peaceful Indians, where their conciliatory offices are not essential. It is an experiment which the politicians will survive the failure of, even if it should bury the President.

But with all the discontent President Grant does as he pleases. Now that the appointments are chiefly made and Congressmen are not here to importune him, he has betaken himself to enjoyment. He is not naturally a laborious man. A notion has prevailed that be leans somewhat to the other extreme. It is oyident that he is not a student. He does not weary himself with reading the good and bad things the papers say of him; he is satisfied with the daily developments in political matters and foregoes the planaure of any deep researches in commentaries upon constitutional law. He is not greatly absorbed in the Sprague reform. That he has taken some interest in the dog question is inferable from his hitherton interest in to interest in the cavine family. He will enjoy his excursions near home, and go to California when he gets time. He will dine General Lee, appoint reconstructed rebels in spite of the scolding of madaine, the doctress of Syracites, and let his brood mares run in the White House grounds for the pleasure of seeing them from the windows of the executive chamber. In the meantime, the dissensions will progress in the party, the army of disappointed office seekers will hold their members responsible for their disappointment, the members will charge the failure to Grant, who, among them all, will be the only one who has peace, and who, amid the general grumbling and disquietinds, will continue to prefer his relatives and ornia when he gets time. He will dine Genera tude, will con mue to prefer his relatives and friends, while the "Tight Barnacles" are at friends, while the "Tight Barnacles" are at home among their constituents demonstrating the theory of "how not to do it."

The question now to be solved is whether the Republican party, like Senator Sprague's dogs, has had its day. If it has strength enough to bear up against the prevailing muttarings and dissensions produced by the disgraceful scenes which have been enacted since the inauguration, it may surgive the shock of graceful scenes which have been enacted since the inauvuration, it may survive the shock of adverse fortune; but there is no prospect of relief from these internal commotions. So long as the present system prevails of making government patronage available to party use there will be an augmentation of hostile feeling, but a constant reiteration of censorious and revengeful sentiments. With the exception of the eminent occupant of the White House, scarcely a distinguished and efficient supporter of the administration is ready to confess that he is satisfied with the past or cheerful with the prospects of the future. The rebellion, as the dress reformers affirmed, made Grant President, and it made the Republican party. There are some who predict that the President and the party will be travelling different roads when Congress convenes again.

Many of the appointments which the President made by advice were not less fortunate. These were crowded by sheer physical force through the opening which Mr. Washburne left. They were for the most part of politicians with a local reputation, endorsed by executive committees and members of Congress, and gitted with an infinite capacity for "dingdonging" their claims, as Senator Trumbull disparagingly called it, into the ears of the unhappy officer who had to answer their demands. The number of these is, perhaps, not larger than would have successfully run the gauntlef, whoever had been President, while the present pernicious system is in force. But it is large enough to have moderated to some extent the enthusiasm with which the new administration was launched, and to lead many thoughtful and was launched, and to lead many thoughtful and observing men for the moment to look upon the venture with divided emotions. made thousands of enemies without securing

And the New York Herald caps the climax in a leading article as follows:

The fact has become patent that the Republican party is the most corrupt that ever cursed our land. During the war its leaders fell upon the vational treasury and the public credit like so many revenous wolves. Their jobs and robberies in the way of army contracts, in the sale of rotten old hulks for transports, in the building of new war vessels that proved shells or abortions, and in everything connected with supplies, including provisions, clothing, forage, hospital stores, and so on to the end of the catalogue, for the use of the army and navy, were enough to appal any other people than the American. These deprayed and hungry leaders, with appetites for the spoils of office still lingoring in their insatiable maws, have now fastened upon the Senato of the United States, and, with an avariciousness that spurns all compromise, reason and control, demand that no appointment shall be made without their having a finger it the selection. In the homely phrase of a Western senator, they are persistenly "ding-donging" every member of that body; and, it is mortifying to acknowledge, they have in that body friends and conferers as corrupt as themselves, who are ready and are employed to do their bidding in making Indian treaties, allowing enormous grants of land for private purposes, and engaging in other scandalous practices, besides encouraging fraudulent appointments to office.

THE CHARLESTON MARKET.

[FOR THE WEEK ENDING THURSDAY, MAR 6.] COTTON,-The business in this article for the reek just terminated has been marked by fiatness and inactivity, the policy of cautions buying being for the present a feature at all points, and which will centinue until the cotton goods demand assumes a more profitable character. Prices in the English market, under the influence of depressed trade and small sales, show a tendency to decline, and middling uplands, which at the beginning of the week were quoted at 11%d, fell off to 11%d; at New York the value of good grades, of which the stock is hght, have been general y well supported, and mid-dlings have been at about 28%c; and at this point while the better qualities have sustained steady figures, the common kinds have been easier. It is too early in the season for any development to take place which will effect the amount of the staple to be grown this season, but the limited reports fr. m most sections up to this time are rather favorable. The Liverpool and New York markets have shown the following movements during the week, as reported by telegraph: On Friday, April 23, the former was quiet, tales 10,000 bales, uplands 11%d.; the latter was steady, sales 2000 bales at 28%@28%c. On Saturday the former was quiet, sales 8000 baler, uplands 11%d.; the latter was steadier, sales 1500 bales at 28%c. On Monday the former closed easier.
